Career history

I'm A retail manager with 7 years of management experience, looking for a major career change. In 2013 I studied Web development while managing at Woolworths, but decided against looking for a web job. Fast-forward to today, after stepping down from management, I've been hard at work studying everything javascript.

Currently I've spent the better half of 2022 self-teaching as much front-end tech as possible, catching up on current trends. You can find my work on github. If you need someone who is hungry for knowledge, motivated and passionate about the web, send me an email or call me.

Experience

I have been teaching myself javascript, typescript and front-end frameworks such as React, SolidJS & Svelte. I've built many projects and apps all from scratch to learn as much as possible. My major project is a Spotify web player, using their official API, which can be found on my website. At Tafe I learned object-oriented PHP, HTML5, CSS3 & MYSQL. I built a web app which had account creation, login, logout, product management, security measures and data validation.

Personal summary

Keen eye for design and detail, with exceptional html/css knowledge. Strong javascript knowledge with clean readable and functional code. Eager to learn and improve my software development knowledge. Extensive experience with API's such as Spotify and OpenAI.

From my time at Woolworths I have learned many skills such as: Team management, individual performance reviews and setting expectations, excellent time management and organisational skills, running to strict weekly budgets, rostering, customer service and more.
